Clothing is a very visible and integral part of our daily lives. It allows for self-expression in ways that are globally diverse. Additionally, garments continue to be a multi-billion dollar international industry with individuals working on all levels - from designing couture to working in sweatshops. This course will focus on the historical, cultural and sociopolitical development of fashion in Asia and the United States as it relates to the Asian Diasporas.